

Archives Unbound

John F. Kennedy's handwritten missives during the Bay of Pigs crisis. World War II battlefield reports. Personal narratives of missionaries in the jungles of Burma.

These are the primary sources that take scholars beyond the facts and figures of history and into a deeper understanding of their subject. Now, Archives Unbound – cost-effective, full-text-searchable collections of highly targeted historical documents – offers you and your researchers this rare authoritative material in a cross-searchable, digital format.

Never-before-digitized documents

Thousands of archival primary-source documents from the 20th century and earlier – many never before available – not only let users view rare materials that defined history, they redefine how users search those materials.

Created to meet the needs of scholars, universities and special libraries, Archives Unbound spotlights specific, specialized content delivered through an intuitive search platform. That means users spend more time exploring documents and less time searching for them.

Searches that yield success

- Intuitive searches deliver organized results
- Highlighted keywords facilitate research

The perfect platform for archival research

- Subject-specific, full-text-searchable collections support multidisciplinary research in history, political science, legal history, ethnic studies and more
- Highly targeted at 5,000 to 200,000 pages per collection

A constantly growing collection

- Multiple collections added annually to provide a wide range of research support

Try it free

Try Archives Unbound free. Visit www.gale.com/ArchivesUnbound or contact your Gale Representative at 1-800-877-GALE.